Supplementary material 1 – WHO normative activities from soft to hard law

Adapted from Gostin LO, Sridhar D. Global health and the law. New England Journal of Medicine 2014;370(18):1732-40. doi: 10.1056/NEJMr1314094

Type of law	Soft law		Hard Law
Type of discourse	Technical	Political	Normative
Main organs involved	Secretariat without formal endorsement from the WHA	Secretariat, EB, and WHA	Member states through the WHA
Typical documents	Each year expert meeting reports, technical guidelines, and report from the Secretariat are published under the aegis of the WHO on current health issues.	Resolutions and decisions are formal expressions of the opinion or will of International Organization's organs. Other non-binding instruments include recommendations global strategies, and Global actions plans	Convention and regulations are the main hard law instruments of the WHO. They differ by the way states can express reservations. Article 22 provide that regulations are binding on all member states unless a country chooses to 'opt out' (cf art. 20)
Relevant article of WHO constitution	NA	Recommendations Article 23 grants authority to the WHA "to make recommendations to Members with respect to any matter within the competence of the Organization". ¹	Article 19 grants WHA "the authority to adopt conventions or agreements with respect to any matter within the competence of the Organization" following a two-third vote requirement/rule. ¹
Examples	Technical guidance: Documents resulting from the work of technical working group of WHO Staff Report by the Secretariat: Report by the Secretariat are the document that the Secretariat to synthesize the work of the organization.	Recommendations: The International Code of Marketing of Breast-Milk Substitutes in 1981 and the Global Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel in 2010 have been the only two main instruments which were adopted by the WHA with formal reference to Article 23 of the Constitution.	Convention: The first convention that was negotiated under the auspices of WHO was the Framework convention on Tobacco control which was adopted in 2003 [Check]. Regulations: WHO has adopted two sets of regulations. The first is the Nomenclature regulations or international classification of diseases which aim to provide a systematised method regarding how diseases are named. The second is the International Health Regulations (IHR) which were originally adopted in 1951 by WHO* as a legacy from the health multilateral cooperation of 19 th century.

Abbreviation in the table: EB: Executive Board, WHA: World Health Assembly, WHO: World Health Organization. * The IHR was called "the International Sanitary Regulations".

Supplementary material 2 – Summary of errors found in the dataset of WHA resolutions 1948-2022

Type of error	Frequency of occurrence	Examples of WHA resolutions affected
Errors from the database or from the document
The document available from the IRIS database corresponds to another entry	Very rare with only 1 occurrence found <0.1%	WHA 59.26 has the text of 59.27 in the IRIS entry.
A wrong citation is attributed to a resolution because the PDF of the document contains text from different resolutions or annexes associated with a resolution	Rare <1%	Resolution WHA28.38 had also the text of WHA28.39. Resolution WHA41.18 had an annexe which leads to identification of wrong citations.
There is a typo in the text of the resolution itself.	Very rare with only 1 occurrence found <0.1%	Resolutions WHA35.23 is cited as WHA35.23 in resolution 38.21.
Resolutions that are cited but are not in the dataset of documents	Rare < 1%	Nine resolutions from the first WHA: WHA1.15, WHA1.22, WHA1.43, WHA1.80, WHA1.91, WHA1.92, WHA1.130, WHA1.133, and 1.139.
Errors from Optical character recognition
Because a character is not recognized which result in the overall regular expression not being recognized	Frequent with more than 100 occurrences found (3,1%)	WHA37.16 is OCR as "WHA37•16". WHA31.45 appears as "WHA31, 45;" in resolution WHA38.24. WHA35.18 appears as "WHA35/18" in resolution WHA40.22.
A wrong number is assigned to the resolution because of error in the recognition of character	Rare <1%	WHA49.25 was coded WHA49.3820. In resolution WHA47.9, text on the 2 nd page was interpreted as WHA47.57.
Other types of errors detected in the dataset
Missing title in the PDF of the resolution	Very rare <0.1%	WHA 32.3 of 1979

Abbreviation in the table: IRIS: Institutional Repository for Information Sharing, PDF: Portable Document Format WHA: World Health Assembly.

Nodes are at fixed positions over the years. The visualization uses the ‘Prefused Force Directed Layout’ in Cytoscape which is based on the force directed paradigm (Fruchterman TM, Reingold EM. Graph drawing by force-directed placement. Software: Practice and experience 1991;21(11):1129-64.)

Supplementary material 8 – Community detection: examples of chain and chain-like components

We define a chain as at least three resolutions where one resolution connects only two nodes which are not directly or indirectly connected. A pure chain has Number of edges $N_e = N_n - 1$. Where N_n is the number of nodes. In addition, chain-like components include patterns that reassemble a chain but might have redundancies (cf. supplementary material 9 for an example) and or connection to other nodes. We used the PathExplorer plugin in Cytoscape (version 1.1, available from <https://apps.cytoscape.org/apps/pathexplorer>) and selected nodes that appears to be at the start or the end of a chain (or chain-like behaviour to select the path and create a subnetwork). To qualify as a chain or a chain-like component, we considered only edges going in the same direction (except from the starting point of the network).

Abbreviations: GC: giant component, WHA: World Health Organization. * This refers to the nodes and selected edges for chain-like behaviour. In some case, chain like behaviour can have forks with two linked resolutions. Underlined are the resolutions used a starting point for the analysis. In italics are manually selected endpoint when the subnetwork is no longer showing a chain-line pattern.

Supplementary material 9 – Example of a chain-like component on the topic of cardiovascular diseases 1965 – 1989 starting from resolution WHA18.43Supplementary material 10 – Community detection: radial-shaped components

A perfect radial component would have only incoming edges and no connectivity between the direct neighbours of the central node. The first step in the identification of relevant radial-shaped components was to calculate the differences between incoming and outgoing edges for each node of the network. A high value for this difference helps identify nodes which are situated at the centre of a potential radial structure (DIFF). However, additional information is needed about the connectivity between the first neighbours. A second step was to create sub-networks that include the directly connected neighbours for the nodes with a high value during the first step. To evaluate whether the first neighbours are highly connected between themselves, we looked at the ratio of the number of nodes with no incoming connection as a proportion of the total number of nodes (RATIO) in each sub-network. Only those with a score equals or above 50% were considered. A total score (TS) combining the two dimensions was calculated as their ratio. Those with the highest score exhibit a highly radial behaviour.

Supplementary material 11 – Example of a radial component regarding the scale of assessment: sub-network of WHA8.5 showing its direct neighbours (both indegree and outdegree are selected)

WHA8.5, WHA22.6, WHA24.12, and WHA26.21 are all parts of two related radial clusters (only the resolutions directly related to WHA8.5 are shown in this figure. Taking WHA8.5 and its first neighbour (undirected) as the departure point, there is a cluster of 46 resolutions including WHA22.6, WHA24.12 and WHA26.21. This subnetwork is connected by 111 edges with only three connections among nodes different from the central nodes (WHA8.5, WHA24.12, and WHA26.21).

Supplementary material 12 – Densely connected components

We run the Leiden algorithm for community detection as available by the clusterMaker 2 plugin in Cytoscape version 3.9.1.¹ The Leiden algorithm is a hierarchical clustering algorithm that maximizes modularity score for each community. With a resolution parameter set to 3, the resulting network had 1656 nodes and 2910 edges with 184 clusters. We ranked the clusters found by the Leiden algorithm according to the ration between the number edges and nodes. We manually extracted the main topic of the community (in some cases, the communities automatically created by the algorithm combine several topics, these communities are marked with an * in the table below).

Supplementary material 19 – Word cloud of the title of resolutions 1948 – 2022

[illegible]

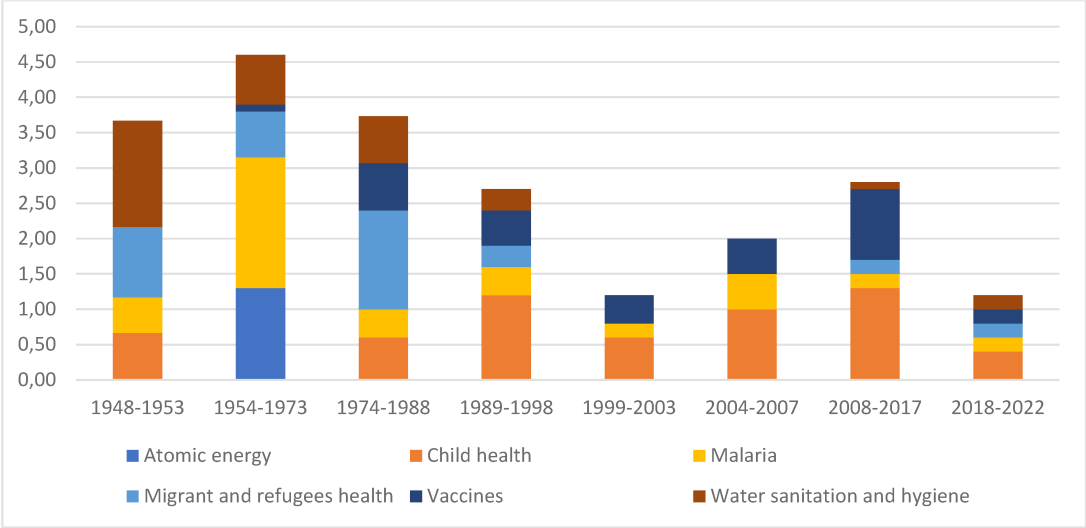

The table was computed by counting the occurrence of a list of selected keywords in the title of all WHA resolutions in the dataset. As, in some cases, several keywords were used to identify a health issue, score were normalized as 1. To make the score independent from the number of resolutions adopted at a specific period, the number of resolutions were calculated for each administration period and then divided by the number of years of the respective administration tenure. This provides information about the relative importance of a topic for a comparable number of years. The results in the table below have not been normalized by the number of resolutions adopted each year which means that the overall score might appear higher when a high number of resolutions were adopted at a specific session of the WHA.

Supplementary material 21 – Stacked column of importance of selected health issues with a score above 1 (in the supplementary material 20)

The figure was computed by using the result of the supplementary material 20.

Supplementary material 22 – Potentially relevant variables related to the WHA resolutions dataset

Type of variable	Aspects to be addressed
Agenda document/report by Secretariat	To what extent agenda document gives rise to a decision and resolutions? How is the technical literature used in agenda document/report by the Secretariat?
Executive Board resolutions and agenda document	How the Executive Board shapes the agenda of the World Health Assembly (or vice-versa)
Annex to the resolutions	Expand our understanding of the content that was adopted and provide a new tool for the interpretation of adopted documents
Constitution of the World Health Organization	Understand the role played by the constitution and what are the section of the constitution that are the most referred to.
Resolutions from the regional office of WHO	Understand the issue of regionalization (decentralization) which has received attention in the literature
Resolution and guidance from other international organization such as United Nations General Assembly	Understand how a specialized agency of the United Nations works within the broader United Nations system.
States use of multiple multilateral fora	How States navigate the United Nations family specialised organizations to promote an agenda or resist normative developments
